

MARCH IS NATIONAL TICK AWARENESS MONTH

Get social... and get the "tick talk" started with ready-to-use social media posts!

National Tick Awareness Month provides an ideal opportunity for you to further position your clinic as pet owners' go-to source of information and advice about tick behaviour, risks and control.

One fun, informal way to do this is by reaching out to pet owners on social media sites. To help you get started, we've created the following consumer-friendly content and visuals you can "cut and post" on your clinic Facebook page or tweet to your followers.

You have to find ticks before you can remove them! Have you ever found ticks on your pet? If so, what size was the largest one you found? The smallest? On what part of the body did you find them? #nationaltickawarenessmonth #tickawareness #tickcontrol

#Ticks on your pet can be hard to spot especially when they're the size of a pinhead. If in doubt, call your veterinarian. #tickawareness

Ticks don't jump. Nor do they fly or drop from trees. They climb up on vegetation and wait for an animal or a person to come close enough to crawl up on them, so they can feed on their blood (Yuck!). Be sure to check your pet (and yourself) carefully after spending time outdoors. And call our veterinary clinic for help in protecting your pet against ticks. #tickawareness #tickcontrol #creepycrawlies

#Ticks don't jump or fly. They crawl on hosts to feed on their blood. Check pets for ticks often and talk to your vet. #tickawareness

Ticks are expanding their range in Canada. That means the risk of pets and people being exposed to ticks and the diseases they can carry – like Lyme disease – is growing. What are the risks in our area? What can you do to reduce them? Your veterinarian can help answer those questions, and set up a tick control program for your pet. Give us a call! #tickawarenessmonth #tickprevention #LymeDisease

#Ticks can transmit #LymeDisease and other diseases to pets and people. Call us for information on how to protect your pet. #tickawareness

Ticks will brave the cold... for warm blood

Make sure it's not your pet's - or yours!

Ticks can survive the winter. When it's 4°C, they "wake up" hungry and eager to find an animal or a person to feed on. Don't let ticks feast on your pet! Start tick control early, before exposure. Give us a call today! #nationaltickawarenessmonth #tickcontrol #tickprevention

#Ticks start looking for an animal or person to feed on at 4°C. Protect your pet - call your vet today. #tickcontrol #tickawareness

March is National Tick Awareness Month

Tick ticks off by learning all you can about them.

Talk to us about tick control measures today!

Found a tick? Don't panic!

Act quickly.

Need help? Call your veterinarian.

Removing a tick as soon as you spot it can reduce the chances of disease transmission. With sharp tweezers, gently pull the tick straight out, being careful not to crush its body. NEVER try to burn a tick with a match or a candle, or cover it with petroleum jelly, nail polish, perfume or alcohol - all potentially dangerous things to do. If you need help, call your vet. #tickawareness #tickremoval #tickdosanddonts

Found a #tick? Remove it right away with sharp tweezers. Grasp close to skin. Call your vet if you need help. #tickremoval #tickawareness

How much do you know about ticks? Do you know where you're most likely to find them? At what temperature they start looking for a blood meal? Or when you should start your pet on tick control? Find out how to outsmart ticks during #NationalTickAwarenessMonth, which runs until the end of March. Call us today! #tickawareness #tickcontrol

March is #NationalTickAwarenessMonth. Find out how to outsmart ticks and protect your pet. Call your vet today. #tickcontrol #tickprevention

Keep the conversation going...

The best way to keep clients engaged and encourage interaction is by responding to comments and questions your friends and/or followers leave on your page. Acknowledge comments. Answer questions. Encourage feedback. And develop trust and loyalty in the process. Enjoy!

NATIONAL TICK AWARENESS MONTH

is an initiative of the Canadian Veterinary Medical Association, in partnership with Merck Animal Health.

